

"Simple Pleasures, Hidden Treasures: Music of Boismortier"

L'Ensemble  Portique

Lisette Kielson, recorder Garry D. Clarke, violin Craig Trompeter, viola da gamba/cello David Schrader, harpsichord

Joseph Bodin de Boismortier (1689-1755) lived a life of fame and fortune. He made riches from his compositions and was one of the most popular composers of the 18th century. Extremely prolific, he composed successfully in the style of the time, keeping a shrewd eye on current fashions and trends. With period instruments, L'Ensemble Portique performs some of Boismortier's little-known trios published during his "Paris" years. Written in the trendy Italian style regarding form and flash, they maintain moments of pure charm and grace so characteristic of the French.
